

Education

Saturday, 21 November 2009

After several successive changes in the Chinese economy over the past twenty years, agricultural productivity has increased tremendously. Activated to activated in foreign trade, took care to improve the organization of the industry.

China is hoping to reach the century of revolution, to 2049, achieved a highly developed country status. One of the keys to this advancement is education. Currently, almost all Chinese children go to school, and over 2 000 000 students in the science gets more than 700 universities and institutes. Nevertheless, illiteracy is still a rarity, though mostly among the elders.